He lectures and publishes frequently on topics of interest to clinical dentists and hygienists.

Course description: Finally a comprehensive course on periodontics that takes the latest evidence and puts it all together in a way that makes sense! This course is perfect for doctors and hygienists who want to use the new periodontics for better patient outcomes. This course is supplemented with office materials that can be immediately used when you return to the office. The success of the periodontal portion of your practice is going to depend on your ability to identify/motivate patients in need of care, and then to use a therapeutic approach that gives the maximum chance to achieve and then maintain a preferred level of oral health. This course will show you how to do both. You will leave with the knowledge and materials necessary to use the new periodontics to benefit your patients and your practice. This course will cover the following:

- The New Periodontics - Taking a risk based approach; what evidence-based really means
- Oral-Systemic Health - The mechanism behind the link; what we now know
- Taking a priority approach: Patients we should be treating differently - Tobacco, diabetics, cardiovascular, stress, genetics, obesity, etc.; what you need to ask
- How to best screen patients
- An evidence based approach to which sites we should be treating
- A comprehensive diagnostic protocol that will work in your office
- The New Goal of Treatment - It's not just pocket depths anymore; Biofilm - what it really means; A new philosophy
- Therapeutics - What to use and when to use it: Hand vs. ultrasonic - finally an answer; local antibiotic delivery - which and when; laser debridement - what we now know; host modulation therapy - low dose doxycycline; nutrition - finally something to talk about
- Where to go from here - What to do starting tomorrow
